IN HOC VOLUMINE

PREFACE.

THE Records now deposited in the antient building which was originally the Chapter House of the Abbey of Westminster are those of the Treasury of the Court of the Receipt of the Exchequer. A useful analysis of the contents of this great depository may be found in a Return made in 1800 to the enquiries of a Committee of the House of Commons by the late Right Hon. George Rose, at that time the Keeper, and printed in the Report on this subject. After describing those Records which exist, each in a series of Volumes, Rolls, or Bundles, and those which admit of being referred to some general head, there remained many single documents of which he has given a catalogue under the title of "Miscellanea."

These are of two distinct characters. Some, and by far the largest portion, are complete documents. But there are others which are detached members of a series in some other office, separated from the rest, it is not known when or how, and to which it should seem that the public convenience requires they should be restored.

Among these Miscellaneous Records are found Many Papal Bulls, amongst which is that by which the title of Defensor Fidei was granted to King Henry VIII. by Pope Clement VII:

—The original Wills of four of our early Sovereigns; viz. Richard II., Henry V., Henry VII., and Henry VIII., found some years ago in a state of great neglect and decay, from which they have been rescued:—Documents relating to the foundation of King Henry VII.'s Chapel:—Many documents relating to the affairs of Cardinal Wolsey, to the King's divorce, to the proceedings of the Visitors of the Religious Houses, and to the Surrenders of those Houses:—Surveys of Estates forfeited in the time of Henry VIII.:—Documents concerning the Mint and Coinage:—Instructions and Covenants respecting Mines and the affairs of the Duchy of Cornwall:—Jewel Accompts:—Wardrobe Accompts:—Accompts of the Surveyors of Works:—and Statutes of the Orders of Saint George and Saint Michael.

Rymer has printed some of the more important of these documents. From those still unpublished the following small selection has been made of a few which relate to the earlier periods of English history.

I.

Rotulus Litterarum Patentium de anno regni Regis Johannis septimo. A.D. 1205 & 1206: p. 1–38.

This Roll is a detached member of the series of Patent Rolls at the Tower, extending from the 3d of King John (1201) to the end of the reign of King Edward IV. (1483.) By what means it became separated from its companions is not now known. Rymer has printed from it five of the Writs, and refers to it in his margin as being then at the Tower. If in this he is correct, it is evident that it has been removed to the Chapter House at a very recent period.

But it may be doubted whether it really was at the Tower at the time when Rymer made his extracts from it, since it was plainly absent from its companions when, about the time that Rymer made his Collections, the extracts from these Rolls were made for Henry Powle Esq., the Speaker of the House of Commons, 1689, now in the Lansdown Library at the Museum, No. 287, &c.

It is endorsed and entitled in the manner above represented. It is, however, in fact, the Roll of the Patent Writs of but one half the year; the earliest being tested on the 30th of November, and the latest on the 9th of May following, which is just before the commencement of the 8th year of his reign.

The Roll consists of seven membranes, which are so attached that the beginning of one immediately follows the end of the other. This was the Chancery mode of preparing the Rolls, while at the Exchequer the several membranes, or small collections of membranes, when to be made up in a Roll, were attached to each other by being stitched together at the head of each.

The Patent Writs are Royal Letters. As in the French Monarchy the King's Letters are of two classes, called the Lettres Patentes and the Lettres de Cachet, so the Letters of the English Sovereigns are of two kinds, the Litteræ Patentes and the Litteræ Clausæ. When the practice arose, in the reign of John, of enrolling copies of those Letters for the purpose of preservation and future reference, and perhaps for the further purpose of being a check upon the forgery of instruments of such great importance, they were entered on two distinct Rolls, now called the Patent Rolls and the Close Rolls, a very important portion of the Records of the Realm.

It is not easy to discover from the contents of the Writs entered on the two Rolls, why some are classed as Patent and others Close; and the sole distinction may from the first have been, that the former were delivered open, and the latter under seal. The popular notion that the Patent Writs are all addressed Omnibus, &c. cannot be sustained, as will appear by the Roll now published. There is, however, a general distinction between the two, lying in the superior importance of the affairs to which the Writs on the Patent Roll chiefly refer.

A Volume containing the Close Rolls for the reign of John, and a part of the reign of Henry III., has been lately published by the Commission, under the superintendence of Mr. Hardy of the Tower. But of the Patent Rolls only single writs have hitherto been published, selected for particular purposes, as by Prynne, Dugdale, Rymer, and others; together with a Calendar published by the Commission in 1802, in a folio volume. A complete Calendar of the Patent Writs would be a very valuable addition to our published historical matter, 'till the Writs themselves can be all published at large,—a work greatly to be desired. But unfortunately the printed Calendar does not notice the tenth part of the whole number of writs entered on the Patent Rolls; and many of its notices of those which are there calendered are too brief and unsatisfactory. This Volume may therefore be considered as presenting the first specimen which has been laid before the Public of the nature of these Rolls; and it has been thought expedient to introduce in this Preface a Calendar in English of the Writs in this Roll, which will, better than any analysis, exhibit the true nature of the Patent Rolls in general, and show how many are the points in English history which admit of illustration from them; and I venture to add, how dubious and uncertain, how deficient in the soundest and best evidence, histories must be which are compiled without the aid of documents such as these, and of that exact chronological order in which many important public transactions are here exhibited.

But if the said Rob. die before the chirograph is made, or the said Joan refuse to concur, that then the 500 marks shall be repaid: the King taking into hand to see them satisfied.—There is scarcely any difference, except in form, between this and the cancelled writ, No. 170.

In reviewing this Calendar we find that a great number of the Patent Writs relate to affairs of Trade. We find twenty-one permissions to export Corn; and a few permissions to export Salt, Hides, Bacon, and Cheese. Licences to import are confined to Wine, and are granted for the most part to Bishops. There is an important document respecting the prisage of Wine in the Port of London, No. 161. Licences to traffic in England are granted to several persons, one of whom is designated as a "Royal Merchant;" but these Licences contain prohibitions to export. One Licence is granted to a person of distinction to export the Corn grown upon his lands for his own redemption; and we have another licence granted by the King to a Baron, to pledge his land to raise money to redeem himself.

Many relate to Ecclesiastical Affairs. There are thirty-one which consist of presentations to benefices or dignities in the Church: another very remarkable one by which the King assures the person to whom it is addressed, that having twice nominated to a Church in his dotation, the King will not hereafter claim the right. Several are general Letters of Protection to the Religious Houses. The affairs of the Abbeys of Malmesbury, Ramsey, and especially of Glaston at that period in a very unsettled state, receive some illustration. We have in No. 23. an important instrument respecting the building of the Church of Lincoln. One instance only occurs of proceedings incident to the Assumption of the Cross and going to the Holy Land; it is in the case of Robert de Roos, who has the King's licence to pledge his lands to raise money for the expence of the enterprise. In No. 54. we have a remarkable catalogue of what constituted the "capellaria" of Hubert late Archbishop of Canterbury; the articles were brought to the King at Tewksbury, who afterwards gave them to the Bishop of Winchester, of whom we have other notices. In other writs we have the terms on which the contest between the King and the Archbishop of Dublin was composed; and in others we perceive the state of disunion in which the King was living with the Archbishop of York, his half-brother. The still more difficult affairs of the See of Canterbury, in the seventh year of King John, almost the only subject on which the Chroniclers of that year have touched, receive, as might be expected, much useful illustration.

Of Secular Affairs, we have various discharges of money and plate; distraints on the lands of the King's debtors; appointments of Bailiffs and Keepers; transfer of the custody of hostages and prisoners; delivery of Castles, Ports, Counties; protections granted to particular persons, especially when about to be absent on the King's affairs. There are several Safe conducts, one of which refers to a secret embassy; another is granted to the King of Scotland to meet the King at York, with an honourable attendance; another to Queen Berengaria the widow of King Richard I., to come to England with her retinue; and another to Reginald King of the Isles, who is called in the Close Rolls of this year, King of Man. There are also many relating to the King's affairs in Ireland, in Poictou, and Gascony. In No. 152 we have a remarkable impress of Ships.

I pass over other matters of inferior importance.

In the preceding Calendar I have inserted the date of time and place only in the instances in which the teste meipso occurs. In these we can entertain no doubt that the King was present in person at the place and time so indicated; and one use to be made of these Rolls is to show what roving lives the early Sovereigns of England led.

In the first fortnight of December the King made two journeys to Canterbury. On his return from the second visit, he set out on a long progress, from which he did not return to the neighbourhood of his Capital till the 18th of March. In the course of this progress he visited Dorchester, from whence he passed by Gillingham, Frome, and Bradenstoke, to Worcester. Having appointed to receive the King of Scotland at York, he proceeded thither, by way of Litchfield, Nottingham, Doncaster, and Sherburn. He was at York from the 8th to the 13th of February, when he removed his Court to Knaresborough, from whence he proceeded to Richmond and Carlisle. On the 21st he was at Lancaster, and on the 1st of March at Chester. From that city he passed by Newcastle under Line and Melburn to Nottingham, and returned through Northamptonshire and Buckinghamshire to Windsor. He remained about London for a week. The month of April was occupied by another tour in the southern counties, in which he proceeded first to Dover, thence through Sussex to Southampton, where he remained several days; he removed to Clarendon, whence he returned to Winchester, and through Alton to the neighbourhood of London. On the 3d of May he was at Swallowfield, whence he passed to Freemantle, Basing, Porchester, Southwich, where he was on the 9th, and where we lose the benefit of the Roll.

Of the five documents published by Rymer from this Roll two are the Safe Conducts to Queen Berengaria and the King of the Isles. That he did not give the Safe Conduct granted to the King of Scotland must have arisen from the want of a steady principle of selection in the preparation of his work, for of the three, it is assuredly of the chief interest. Two others are given apparently for the sake of Otho King of the Romans, whose name occurs in them, namely, the pardon of Hugh de Gurney, and the confirmation of Otho's gift while Earl of Poictou to the Monks of Charron. The fifth is the remarkable Letter to the Bishops, requesting them to affix their seals to letters addressed to the Pope. Only one of these documents is published with perfect accuracy. Hugo de Gurnaco appears as Hugo de Burnaco, an error of the greater moment as there were two families, both of distinction, the Gurnays and the Bernakes. But the most important mistake is the placing the circular Letter to the Bishops, dated May 8, in the 7th of his reign, in the A.D. 1205, since it certainly belongs to the A.D. 1206; thus introducing confusion and disorder into the history of that great national event, the dispute of King John with the Court of Rome.

Rymer may not have been aware of the fact which is made evident by all the Chancery Rolls of this reign, that the years of the reign of John are reckoned from Ascension Day to Ascension Day.

Transcripta omnium Litterarum Patentium Debitorum et Compotorum ac Annuitatuum sub testimonio Loca-tenentium Hiberniæ, aut Justiciariorum, temp. R. Henrici V. et ab anno I. ad annum XII. R. Henrici VI.—p. 39–103.

King Henry VI., by writ under the Privy Seal, dated at Westminster the 10th day of February in the 12th of his reign, A.D. 1434, directed to the Lord Treasurer of Ireland and the Barons of the Exchequer of that Kingdom, called upon them to make return of all discharges of debts and accompts, and also of all annuities which had been granted by any Lieutenant or Justice of Ireland, from the day of his father's coronation to the then present time. The Record which is here printed consists of the Original Writ and the Return which was made to it by Sir Thomas Strange the Treasurer, and the Barons of the Irish Exchequer.

The Return is made on four Rolls stitched together at the head, each consisting of several membranes.

Each of these Rolls has its own heading, declaring the particular kind of grants of which it contains the Record.

The first Roll, which consists of five membranes, contains transcripts of Letters Patent of King Henry V., of all discharges of debts, accompts, and arrears of accompts enrolled in the Irish Exchequer:—p. 40–62.

The Roll, p. 63–90, is composed of eight membranes, and contains copies of all grants of Annuities or of Manors, Lands, Tenements, Rents, and Services, made in the time of Henry V. and Henry VI., and enrolled in the Rolls of the Chancery or of the Memoranda of the Exchequer in Ireland.

The third Roll, which consists of two membranes only, contains transcripts of Letters Patent of Annuities granted to divers persons in the time of Henry V. and Henry VI., enrolled in the Memoranda of the Irish Exchequer, p. 91–95. Among the few grants in this Roll are two to the Cities of Dublin and Waterford respectively, remitting to them a portion of their fee-farm for a term, on account of losses sustained by them from the Irish enemy and the English rebels; and in respect of the city of Waterford, of what it had lost at sea by British, Scotch, and Spanish vessels:—Ac jam civitas predicta in tantam paupertatem devenit tam per destructiones, roborias, et occisiones de melioribus civibus dictæ civitatis per Hibernicos inimicos et Anglicos rebelles factas per terram quam per roborias et occisiones factas per Britones Scottos et Ispanios armatos per mare.

The fourth Roll, p. 95–103, is a continuation of Roll I., containing transcripts of Letters Patent of King Henry VI., of all discharges of debts, accompts, and arrears of accompt made to divers persons, and enrolled in the Memoranda of the Exchequer.

These Returns were called for, with a view probably to some revision of the grants and discharges, during the time that Sir Thomas Stanley, then the Lieutenant of Ireland, was absent in England.

It appears by the Reports from the Commissioners of the Public Records in Ireland, that there are Memoranda of the Exchequer from the reign of Edward II., and Chancery Rolls of Letters Patent from the reign of Edward I.—See Cooper on the Public Records, vol. i. p. 311, and vol. ii. p. 337.

III.

The six rolls which are printed in whole or in part, extending from the 105th page to the end of the volume, relate to the affairs of the Reign of King Henry III.

The battle of Evesham, in which the Earl of Leicester was slain and the great strength of the Barons broken, was fought on the 4th August 1265, the 49th of the King's reign. This battle gave also liberty to the King; one of whose first Acts was to call together one of those great Councils of which we read in the Chroniclers of the times before Parliaments received the impress of that marked and defined character which they have since borne. In the determination, if not of the Classes of Persons, yet of the Individuals who were to compose this assembly, the King seems to have been governed by no settled principle founded on previous usage, but to have selected arbitrarily at his own pleasure. This Parliament therefore, consisted, for the most part, if not entirely, of persons who were devoted to the interest of the King, as that interest is to be contemplated in opposition to that of the Baronage; and it contained many persons who were exasperated by the losses and sufferings which they or their families had incurred in the great struggle which had been so long maintained. The Parliament was summoned to meet at Winchester on the Feast of the Exaltation of the Holy Cross, September 14, 1265. It was not to be supposed that a Parliament thus assembled before the excitement had time to subside, would proceed in the spirit of moderation in respect of the measures which the King might be advised to take; or that the King himself, who had just escaped from a restraint of fourteen months' duration, would be unwilling to avail himself of the advantageous position in which he was placed, to break for ever a power which he had found so dangerous. Nothing less than the absolute confiscation of all the lands of all the Persons who had been or who were then engaged in the Rebellion, and the gift of them to the King, was one of the first measures on which the Parliament determined.

But while in the Battle of Evesham many of the chiefs of the rebellious Barons had been cut off with the Earl of Leicester, many still remained alive, and with them adherents forming together a force which was still formidable. To the previous causes of dissatisfaction which had led to the open hostilities was now added the necessity of fighting for the preservation of their private possessions; and it would seem from an expression used in the Annals of Waverley, that the party of the Barons was from this time regarded less in the light of men who were contending for some great public principle, than as a body of disherited persons, rendered desperate by the desperate state to which their fortunes were reduced. The expression to which I allude is the term "Exheredatos," by which, and no other, the party is described when speaking of the events of the following year* ; and the same term is said by Brady to be used by other Chroniclers when speaking of them; and it occurs once at least in these rolls. Under these circumstances it was, that the remains of the party of the Barons entrenched themselves in places which seem, in the mode of warfare then in use, to have been thought most favourable for defence, extensive marshes and swamps,—the Isle of Axholme in the northern parts of Lincolnshire, and the Isle of Ely.

The King was, however, determined to lose no advantage whch promptness could in these circumstances give him. He sent forces against those who were in Axholme; and on the Ides of May 1266, he obtained a second victory over the Barons, at Chesterfield, where the Earl of Ferrers was taken prisoner.

Still there was a powerful force in arms against him. The Castle of Kenilworth was held by a party who made a most obstinate resistance; and the fens of Ely were still occupied by a numerous body of men, who often made excursions into the neighbouring counties, and who, on one occasion, advanced even so far as Norwich. The King himself was with an army, during the greater part of the summer of that year, encamped before the castle of Kenilworth.

The Pope had not been an unconcerned spectator of the distractions from which England had so long been suffering.

* Annales Waverleienses.—Gale, ii. 222.

He had thrown his influence into the scale of the King. But now that the contest might be said to have subsided, so far as it respected any great constitutional or political question, and was a contest of vengeance on the one hand, and despair on the other, the Pope became the advocate of peace and mercy; and it was chiefly through the mediation of the Legate Ottobone, that the King consented to the adoption of lenient measures, and to rescind the determination which had stripped at once of all their revenues the persons of higher or lower dignity who had been, in any portion of the contest so long carried on, arrayed against him.

It seems to be left undetermined by the Chroniclers of the time under what species of authority it was that the Twelve Mediators agreed upon the terms between the King and the Barons, which are embodied in what is called the Dictum de Kenilworth. The words in which the writer of the Annals of Waverley speaks of the transaction are these:—Item ad instantiam Legati Dominus Rex submisit se et suos dicto quatuor Episcoporum, quatuor Comitum, quatuor Baronum, ut ipsi duodecim pacem et tranquillitatem Regni Angliæ reformarent. There is no mention of any representatives of the Barons having been consulted in the affair. The terms were very moderate and reasonable as respected them; and this Dictum may be regarded as at once the chief cause of the state of internal tranquillity which continued for so many years, and as having done much to fix and establish certain constitutional principles, which are in operation through the whole period of our history to the present moment.

It would be beside the purpose of the present Preface to enter into an examination of the effect of all the clauses in this important Document. The portion of it with which we are concerned is only that which relates to the terms on which the disherited Barons and other persons were allowed to redeem their lands.

"Willing to proceed according to the path of equity, by the consent of the Reverend Father Ottobone, Deacon Cardinal of St. Adrian and Legate of the Apostolic See, and the Noble Man H. of Almaine, having like power and authority, We have thought it good to be provided in this wise, that there shall be made no disherison, but redemption, that is to wit:

First, concerning them that began the war and yet continue:

Item, they that forcibly and maliciously held Northampton against the King:

Item, they that were taken at Kenilworth which came from the sacking of Winchester, or that other-where were against the King whom he hath not yet pardoned:

Item, they that warred at Evesham against the King:

Item, they that were at Chesterfield against the King in battle:

Item, they that freely, wilfully, and uncompelled sent any aid against the King or his son:

Item, the Bailiffs and Officers of the Earl of Leicester which robbed their neighbours, and procured man-slaughters, house-burnings, and other evils to be done:

Shall pay as much as their lands be worth by the space of Five Years."

So far the meaning of the Clause is perfectly clear in the Dictum itself, and in the English version of it which accompanies it in the Statutes, as published by the Commission.

In some copies of the Dictum there is a clause which places in the same condition "those that assailed and warred against the King at Lewes." The meaning of the words which follow, as exhibited in the printed copy, is not so clearly expressed; but it appears to have been this:—That parties paying redemption, that is, the five years' purchase of their lands, should have their lands again; and that in cases, many of which we are sure must have occurred, in which they were unable to redeem but by the sale of portions of their lands, or perhaps, in some instances, of the whole, the right of pre-emption was given to those who were in actual possession by the gift of the King. The payment of the redemption was to be made in three years.

It was further determined that the Earl of Ferrers should pay seven years' purchase for his redemption, and that Knights and Esquires who had been engaged in wars and raids, who had no lands, but goods only, should forfeit one half of their goods. The lords of heirs under age were to redeem their lands for them, and the heirs to pay the same to the lords when of full age.

The money paid for the redemption was to go in the first instance to the King; but by the twenty-second article it was provided that large rewards were to be given out of it to those who had been faithful to the King, and who thus lost the lands which had been given them out of the forfeited estates.

To see to the execution of this, twelve persons were to be appointed by the Legate, the King, and Henry de Almaine.

It was further provided that Fermors, who had been against the King, were to forfeit their leases; that persons not actually in arms, but using influence against the King, should forfeit two years' value of their lands, and persons who through fear acted against the King, or in violation, should pay one year's value of their lands; that they who had bought goods that had been taken by plunderers in the war, knowing them to be so, should be amerced; and that those who were in Northampton, but fought not, but when they saw the King coming retired to the Church, those holding not of the Earl of Leicester, to forfeit half a year's value of their lands, and those holding of him to be amerced to the King. Innocent persons, who had been disherited through false accusation or otherwise, to be restored to their lands without delay, and women to have such heritage and dowers as they were entitled to.

The Dictum of which these were part of the provisions, was given and proclaimed at Kenilworth on the day before the Kalends of November, 1266, in the 51st year of the King.

Hitherto it is believed no account has been published of the proceedings subsequent to the Dictum in respect of the redemption of the lands and the settlement of the many disputes which could not but arise in carrying provisions such as these into effect. In the present Volume there are five documents relating to these proceedings, contained in five several Rolls. One of these, which is entitled Terræ Rebellium datæ fidelibus tempore Regis Henrici III. in diversis comitatibus Angliæ, contains a brief notice of many forfeited lands, with the names of the persons to whom they had previously belonged, and of those who then held them by the gift of the King. The other four Rolls are entitled Placita de Terris datis et occupatis occasione turbacionis in regno Angliæ, and contain the record of the proceedings in consequence of the Dictum in the four several counties of Essex, Northampton, Suffolk, and Cambridge.

These pleas will be perused as being the best comment on the terms of the Dictum; but they may also be perused with great advantage as they exhibit in the detail of minute facts which are brought out in the charges and replications, many of the circumstances of that state of disturbance, the tempus guerræ of the reign of Henry III. in which England was placed, and show where the severities of it were chiefly felt. There is also much anecdote for the biographer and topographer, and the enquirer into the customs and the state of society of that period may find in these Rolls something that will assist his researches. The Rolls containing these Placita are formed of various single rolls attached together at the head after the manner of the Exchequer Records. To each is attached one membrane on which the names of the jurors for the several hundreds are entered. These lists have not been printed. The Pleas in the County of Essex are those only which are printed entire. Of the Pleas for the other counties extracts only are printed of matters which appeared to the gentleman to whose care the publication of this volume had been confided to possess the most curiosity and interest.

The Terræ Rebellium is printed entire, as is also the short Roll, p. 259–265, entitled Terræ Normannorum seisitæ in manum domini Regis tempore Regis Henrici III. vel ante in diversis comitatibus. The title does not describe the contents of this Roll with strict accuracy. It is not a complete account of the lands belonging to foreigners which had been forfeited by Henry III. and John in their contests or compositions with the Kings of France; but a kind of summary or digest of divers grants which had been made to various persons touching those lands.

The preparation of this Volume was originally committed to a gentleman connected with the office in which these Records are deposited, who had settled all the editorial arrangements, and superintended by far the largest portion of the volume through the press before my assistance was called in. My duty has therefore been for the most part a revision of the text and the preparation of the present introduction. The principle on which the original Editor proceeded was that of making the printed work conform as nearly as common typography, with a few contracts cast for the purpose, would admit, to the writing before him. This, in most instances, deprives the reader of the benefit of any regular system of punctuation. Other difficulties will also occur in the reading of these records; but variations from the original must not be presumed in all cases in which a different orthography might be expected, or where a violation of a concord is discernible.

Sub-Commissioner.
